

I write to express my considered opinion that any further consolidation of media ownership in the US will result in even greater loss of a variety of viewpoints. The case of Clear Channel is an excellent example of the restriction of free speech which such consolidation engenders. There should be strong restrictions on multiple ownership of broadcast outlets of all types in order to provide the greatest possible diversity of media perspectives.